MARKET OUTLOOK - EQUITY, CURRENCY & COMMODITY

What in Nifty?

Tracking Nifty For The Week: (Week ending May 19, 2017, -All Nifty levels refer to Nifty Futures) The trend deciding point for the week for Nifty was at 9397 mark. During this week as long as Nifty did not close BELOW the level of 9397 market was not expected to go DOWN. It was envisaged that the current trend was expected to take Nifty towards the first weekly resistance of 9471 mark. If Nifty closed below the first resistance point of 9471 or turned much before 9471 under selling pressure, then nifty was to move towards the trend deciding point of 9397 mark. Further selling pressure here was to make Nifty close below this trend deciding point and change the immediate trend to negative. If such an event occurred, then nifty was to move towards 9329 mark, the first weekly support, depending on the supply pressure. On the other hand, if demand pressure was strong at 9471 and Nifty closed above this level, then it was expected to move towards 9539 mark or 9613 mark, depending on the demand pressure.

For Friday, May 19, 2017, the trend deciding point for the day for Nifty emerges at 9395 mark. On its down move Nifty is expected to take support around 9395 mark. If this mark is broken due to strong selling pressure, then the next support is expected to emerge at 9322 mark. But this will be possible only if there is a sharp down move. On ascent, the first resistance exists at 9506 mark. A sharp up move can make nifty cross this level and make it reach to 9543 mark, depending on the demand pressure. An intermediate resistance stands at 9476 mark. If there is not much demand, then Nifty can reverse from here for downside, instead of 9506 mark. On the other hand, an intermediate support exists at 9405 mark. If there is not much supply, then Nifty can reverse from here for upside, instead of 9395 mark.

What in Banknifty?

Tracking Banknifty For The Week: (Week ending May 12, 2017, -All Banknifty levels refer to Banknifty Futures) The trend deciding point for the week for Banknifty was at 22765 mark. During this week as long as Banknifty did not close BELOW the level of 22765, Banknifty was not expected to go DOWN. The current trend was expected to take Banknifty towards the first weekly resistance of 22948mark. For any reason, if Banknifty closed above the first resistance point of 22948, then the immediate trend was to continue to be positive and Banknifty was to move towards 23168mark or 23351 mark, depending on the demand pressure. On the other hand, If this resistance of 22948was not crossed or if bank nifty moved downward much before touching this point then there were chances that Banknifty would move towards the trend deciding point of 22765 mark. A further selling pressure at 22765 was to make Banknifty close below this level and then the immediate trend was to turn in to negative and it was to provide a push to Banknifty to touch 22544mark, the first weekly support, depending on the supply pressure.

For Friday, May 19, 2017, the trend deciding point for the day for Bank Nifty works out at 22592mark. Thus any fall in Bank Nifty towards this level of 22592 should get a support. If this support zone is broken due to strong selling pressure, then the next support is expected to emerge around 22418mark, depending on the supply pressure. But this is possible only if there is a sharp down move. On the ascent, an important resistance exists at 22772mark. If this is crossed, then the next resistance is expected to emerge at 22949mark, based on the demand pressure.
